

Handwritten Latin text in a cursive script, heavily obscured by a large black ink blot on the right side. The text is mostly illegible due to the damage.

Handwritten Latin text at the bottom left, partially obscured by the seal.

Martin 3 (33)

Fragment of a parchment document with a large irregular hole on the left side. The text is written in a medieval script, likely Gothic or similar, and is mostly illegible due to fading and the damage. At the top left, the Roman numeral 'MXXX' is visible. At the bottom center, the word 'Martin' is written in a larger, bolder script, followed by '(33)'. There are several circular stamps or seals on the page, including one in the bottom left corner and another in the top right corner. The parchment is aged and shows signs of wear.

